Within the framework of MTQ, there are three broad streams of planting models that are affirmed for planters working within the QB movement. These are as follows:

Start-ups: this is the familiar model historically that has been used. It is attractational and built around discipleship, regular public services of worship; programmes for the strengthening of faith and community; and, leadership both from within in the local church and from a pastoral leader(s) appointed by agreement.

Hybrids: this model involves the integration of discipleship and the informal gathering of believers with an active and incarnated community engagement approach; and,

Simple: this model is the full church but in miniature - there is still the eating together; the Lord's Supper; the Apostles teaching; prayer; generosity; hospitality and discipleship, but all this occurs within (usually) a home. It is a flexible model, but it still involves discipleship that is learning in community on mission.

Please come to the interview to explain which of these broad models you feel called to and why you have come to this conclusion.
